

energy crunch

The world is on the verge of an unprecedented energy crunch whose effects will dwarf those of the credit crunch. Global oil production, after rising steadily for the past 100 years, is about to go into decline with no replacement available. Oil is used for 90% of the world's transportation plus is essential in food production and thousands of other products.

How will this affect us? How will it affect the economy, our way of life, our civilisation? When will it happen? And why aren't we being told?

Transition Sheffield presents 5 nights and one afternoon of film to explore the issue of energy decline and related issues.

Entry to all events is free, as are tea and biscuits.
